Albany sits at the center of Southwest Georgia, a storied region closely tied to America's early Indian culture, the antebellum age of the Old South and the timeless sports of fishing and hunting. Lying below the land around Albany is the Floridan Aquifer, an ocean of fresh water that feeds the area's rivers and creeks and fuels its economy.

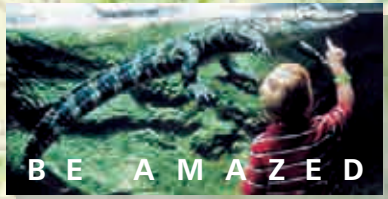

Outdoor adventure, the arts, shopping, dining and the friendliest folks anywhere. Albany has it all! With so much to see and do, you'll want to visit us again and again.

The first inhabitants of the area now known as Albany were the Creek Indians who called their home along the riverbank "Thronateeska," meaning "the place where flint is picked up". Fittingly, the river that flows through Albany is called the Flint. Nelson Tift founded the city in 1836, hoping that the settlement would prosper as a trade center like Albany, New York.

Albany grew to incorporate several plantations during the mid 1800s and saw no battles during the Civil War to interfere with the plantations' production. Rather, the large plantations provided cotton and desperately needed food for the Confederacy.

Albany eventually turned to the rails for transportation, becoming a rail center by the turn of the 20th century after finding that low water and sandbars in the Flint River made steamboat navigation unreliable. Union Station, which united the seven railroads that served as many as 55 trains daily, is now the home of the Thronateeska Heritage Center. Industry and commerce followed the railroads, and an active arts community ensured cultural as well as economic growth.

WELCOME TO Albany!

the historic Bridge House

Prior to 1858 Nelson Tift operated a ferry to cross the Flint River, carrying goods and people. The crossing could be treacherous at times depending upon water levels. So, in 1857, Tift hired Horace King, a former slave and master bridge builder throughout the Southeast, to build a bridge across the Flint River. At the time, King was in the process of constructing a bridge near Milledgeville when a dispute arose about payment. Since he had another job waiting in Albany, King loaded the bridge sections and brought them south, essentially creating the first known prefabricated bridge.

The Bridge House, which originally housed offices for Tift and the toll taker on the first floor and a theatre called Tift Hall on the second floor, was built in 1858. The toll for crossing the bridge varied depending on whether you were on foot, leading livestock or in a wagon. At the rear of the Bridge House is an overlook at the location of Albany's first bridge.

In 1915, the Keenan family purchased the Bridge House for their blacksmithing, wheelwrighting and general repair business. The facility gradually changed into an automotive repair, scrap iron and auto parts store, undergoing various remodeling projects to accommodate the business transformation.

Albany's first Welcome Center

Former Albany Mayor, Paul Keenan, who spent more than half of his life working in the Bridge House, deeded the property to Dougherty County in 2001, noting the property is a monument to the history of Albany and Dougherty County and dedicating it to public use. In August of 2008, the Convention and Visitors Bureau opened in the renovated historic Bridge House.

Albany is ideally located, just 3 hours from both the beaches on the east coast and on the Gulf of Mexico. Atlanta is just 183 miles north. Our moderate climate allows for outdoor activities year round.

ATTRACTIONS

Mingle with the meerkats in the “wild.” Listen to Ray Charles play in the Plaza. Divine climate conditions in the new weather center. Get an eyeful of the universe and come face to face with creatures of the deep. Albany has adventure that is out of this world and right up your alley: Chehaw – “Nature’s Playground” with Wild Animal Park; RiverFront Park anchored by Ray Charles seated at his Baby Grand – which plays music throughout the day and evening, Turtle Grove Play Park, a 1.5 mile Greenways Trail System and paved three-mile Riverwalk; Thronateeska Heritage Center with Wetherbee Planetarium, Science Discovery Center and Museum of History; Flint RiverQuarium and Imagination Theater with three-story IWERKS screen and digital surround sound.

From the legacy of the railroads to its key role in the Civil Rights Movement, Albany’s history and heritage comes to life in a model train layout at Thronateeska Heritage Center, the newly expanded Albany Civil Rights Institute, home of the SNCC Freedom Singers, and the Old Mt. Zion Church, where Martin Luther King, Jr. spoke. As the cultural center of Southwest Georgia, Albany supports a symphonic orchestra, live theater ensemble, chorale and ballet company in addition to the Albany Museum of Art with an ever-growing European and American art collection and one of the most impressive collections of sub-Saharan African art in the Southeastern United States.

The Kinchafoonee and Muckalee Creeks flow into the Flint River at Lake Chehaw, a 1,400-acre lake made for boating and fishing. Albany is a true sportsman’s paradise and made even more so with a moderate climate so the outdoors may be enjoyed year round.

Golfers find a number of challenging courses in Albany and surrounding areas and, during hunting season, marksmen from around the world aim for Albany where hunting plantations abound.
