Where do you go when there are no battlefields?

The National Museum of the Mighty Eighth Air Force opened on May 14, 1996. Covering an area of 90,000 square feet, the museum is situated just a few miles from downtown Savannah, where the Eighth Air Force was activated in 1942. It showcases the bravery, valor, patriotism, and sacrifices of the Eighth's heroes.

About the Museum

The museum provides visitors with a unique opportunity to experience the rich and fascinating history of the Mighty Eighth Air Force by showcasing exhibits, rare objects, photographs, planes and the immersive Mission Experience, as well as the fully restored B-17 Flying Fortress, the City of Savannah.

In addition to the museum, the campus includes a Memorial Garden, the Chapel of the Fallen Eagles, and five static aircraft.
